

SMITH IS BACK HOME

He Tries to Be Sarcastic in Speaking of His Case.

WILL BE ARRAIGNED TODAY

Mr. Wasty Declares That the Case Cannot Be Settled Without Compromising a Felony.

Detective J. A. Smith arrived in the city yesterday afternoon at 1:30 over the D. G. H. & M. railroad from Port Huron with Leon S. Smith, the young fellow who has gained notoriety by his bold exploits during the last few days. They were accompanied by Mrs. Margaret K. Smith and Joseph W. Crater, the prisoner's mother and uncle who had been to Port Huron in the young man's interest. The prisoner was taken to the police station. His mother appeared shortly after with a well laden basket of refreshments and the young man ate his dinner while his mother sat by his side. She asked the turnkey that she be permitted to remain with her son alone, but the request was not granted, a jail officer being detailed to stay in the room with them. Mrs. Smith was nervous and appeared to be excited. A reporter for The Herald called to see him, and when asked if he intended to make an effort to settle his trouble with the local banks, the prisoner replied that Leon Smith ought to be pretty thoroughly posted in regard to his affairs without seeking an interview with him. From what he had read in The Herald he would judge that he knew more about his business than he does himself. He said he had settled with the Flint bank, but when asked a second time if he would try to settle with the local banks said he had nothing to say, but referred the reporter to George P. Wasty, his attorney. Mr. Wasty was seen and said he was not acting as attorney for Smith. He had been consulted by the boy's mother, who had been referred to him by the prosecuting attorney at Port Huron. She wanted him to look after her boy's interest in police court, and see that his case was not railroaded through without a fair hearing. The attorney went to the police court and had a talk with Smith, but was not acting as attorney. Mr. Wasty succeeded in having the arraignment postponed until this morning, when another effort will be made to secure a further adjournment until tomorrow morning. Mr. Wasty said the matter cannot be legally dropped here now, and an arraignment must be had. Under the statutes it would be compromising a felony to discontinue the proceedings, and Mr. Wasty said he would not be a party to such an agreement. The case will be pushed by the officers of the Old National bank.

The prisoner admitted to the detectives that he forged the name of the cashier of the Commercial National bank of which he defrauded the Old National and the State banks of this city, and said he had no defense to make. The Flint bank did not prosecute him because it knew he would be brought here and justice meted out without any trouble to the bank and expense to the county. The prisoner was locked up at police headquarters in cell No. 12 last night where he remained during the night.

COUNCIL COMMITTEES

A New District for the McDowell Street Opening—Other Business.

The busiest committee of the common council last night was the special committee appointed some time ago by Mayor Stuart to prepare a district to be annexed for the opening of McDowell street, from Jefferson to Madison avenue. This opening case has been under consideration for three years, and has been in the supreme court of the state. The district prepared by the special committee was not satisfactory to the taxpayers, as it was submitted on a graduated plan. Some of those opposed the annexation so strenuously that an appeal was taken, and last night a scene of them appeared before the committee and made their arguments against it. It was finally decided by the committee to make a new district, extending from South Ionia street to East street. The district will take in about 600 feet on either side of McDowell street from Ionia street to East street.

The committee on bridges settled the bridge connected by the discharge of Thomas (Dad) as clerk of bridges. It decided to recommend the appointment of John Cole, who has held the position for the last few days.

A committee on ordinances held a consultation with Architect Robinson and building inspector Davidson with reference to the proposed building ordinance. The committee will furnish these gentlemen with a copy of the ordinance for their inspection and they will report what they think of it at the next meeting.

Several street cleaners appeared before the committee on parks and talked over the matter of material for the Crescent park steps. The committee decided to convene for bids to furnish either

Born or Belfast stone for the park steps.

The committee on sidewalks to whom was referred the petition of Willard Barnhart and others asking that they be permitted to retain the plank sidewalk around the old county building until next year, decided not to grant the petition and to order a stone walk laid at once.

Too high for comfort. A lady said a few days ago, and she told the truth. That if Cleveland would send to Dr. Ross of Grand Rapids, he could be cured of his rheumatism, but his position would not admit of his doing so, she presumed. Poor man!
